

More Circles and Speed Bumps Proposed in New Traffic Plan

by Sandy Smith

Transportation by car, bus, bicycle and foot was the main topic of discussion at the September 27 meeting of the Greenbelt City Council. Council held a public hearing on a traffic calming plan for Greenbelt East, approved a set of recommendations on crosswalks in the city and responded to a proposed reduction in service by TheBus in Greenbelt.

Even recreational transportation came in for its share of attention, with contracts approved for the design and construction of the skateboard park.

Traffic Calming

Celia Craze, director of Planning and Community Development, kicked off the hearing with a summary of the key aspects of the traffic calming plan. The plan had been developed over the past several months with a good deal of citizen input and meetings with the home owners' associations in Greenbelt East. Craze walked through the engineering and signage changes which she believes will improve traffic flow and safety for drivers and pedestrians.

The changes include new traffic roundabouts, traffic islands, sidewalks, road striping and marking, pedestrian crossings and speed humps. Many of the

Plan Details

According to Celia Craze the Greenbelt East traffic calming plan considered by the council proposes speed humps on Hanover Parkway at the approaches to each of the two traffic circles on the road. No additional circles are planned for Hanover Parkway.

In Greenbriar, the plan proposes that Hanover Parkway be narrowed with markings to one lane in each direction between Greenbelt Road and Mandan Road.

The plan also proposes new traffic circles for four intersections in Greenbelt East. On Ora Glen Drive it proposes circles at the intersections of Morrison Drive and Frankfurt Drive. On Megan Lane, it proposes circles for the intersections of Mathew Street and Craddock Road.

New medians are to be constructed on Ora Glen Drive at the junctions with Mandan Road and Hanover Parkway and also at the point where the road narrows from 52 feet wide to 45 feet.

improvements are intended for Hanover Parkway, a busy thoroughfare with cars, bikes and walkers.

Hanover Parkway will be marked for one-lane traffic with the other lane reserved as an access lane. A number of speed humps (lower than speed bumps) will be added and sidewalks will be constructed along the road where they are missing. One example is at the site of the new post office when that construction is completed. Craze described a major improvement slated for the bus stop on Hanover Parkway at Schrom Hills Park. Right now, passengers wait on the side of the road. In the new plan, a raised bus stop will be constructed that can be reached by the park path. It will be more convenient and provide greater safety to bus riders.

She anticipates that the design phase will continue through the winter months and that construction will start in the spring and be completed in three months.

There were a number of comments and questions for Craze. Councilmember Rodney Roberts wanted to know if the plans had been referred to the Police and Fire Departments. Craze said that all aspects of the plan met highway standards, which take into consideration emergency needs, but that she would refer the plans for comment by both.

Museum Talk Recalls Days Of Rosebuds and Fringes

by Virginia Beauchamp

Though the edge of tropical storm Jeanne was pounding Greenbelt on Tuesday evening, September 28, 50 or so history buffs turned out through the wind and rain for an illustrated talk by Dr. Shelley Nickles, project curator at the Smithsonian's Museum of American History, on household product design during the 1950s. Sponsored by the Greenbelt Museum as part of its continuing lecture series, the talk was entitled "More Is Better, or Less Is More."

This was the period of the Cadillac with the huge tail fins, of colorful kitchens and expensive consumer goods Nickles reminded the listeners, most of whom could clearly remember those good old days – or maybe not so good. Nickles described a continuing tension between designers, who favored trimmed down and streamlined design principles in furniture and appliances, and the desires of the postwar consumer.

Able to afford modern kitchens, these postwar bluecollar workers sought what Nickles called "exuberance." In silverware they chose designs with rosebuds, in furniture they chose overstuffed sofas, on curtains or lampshades they went for ruffles and fringe. On dinette sets their choice was chrome.

Something Different

Through motivation research studies conducted at the University of Chicago, it became clear that people wanted something different from what they saw in the factories where they worked. They wanted substantial, comfortable furniture. They wanted

Greenbriar Residents Show Condominium Group's Heart

by Carol Griffith

The Greenbriar Condominiums' Community Association sponsored an appreciation dinner at Greenbelt's Silver Diner restaurant on September 29. It was a celebration of the 30 years of the Greenbriar community and also an inspiring demonstration of how a community can respond to assist its members in the wake of a tragedy.

In November 2003 a fire at 7806 Hanover Parkway left all 15 units uninhabitable and took the life of Mary Alice Carroll, a Phase II board member. Though displaced from their homes, the residents of 7806 have had to continue to pay condo fees, mortgages and, in some cases, the cost of temporary housing. In response, a group of residents formed a Fire Relief Committee chaired by Larry Noda and has raised nearly $9,000 to help the displaced residents.

The members of the Fire Relief Committee, other community volunteers and representatives of Condominium Ventures (CVI) management company, the company managing the condominiums, were among the 110 people invited to the appreciation dinner organized by Sarah Phillips, Greenbriar's community affairs director.

In addition to providing a special menu and reserving a part of the restaurant for the dinner, Baba Sarr, the Silver Diner operating partner, agreed to donate 10 percent of the dinner's proceeds to the fire relief fund.

Plans for Convalescent Center Site Only Partially Resolved

by Thomas X. White

At a follow-up worksession on September 22 with representatives of Baier Properties, contract purchaser of the Greenbelt Road Convalescent Center site, council reviewed the status of various issues and concerns posed at the August 30 worksession at its development proposal for the site. Again, however, council could not reach complete agreement regarding Baier's request for city support of its proposed zoning text amendments necessary to move the project forward.

The worksession agenda also included the boundary survey results for the lake path and adjacent home sites (News Review, September 30, 2004) and council discussion of its strategy for securing planning and zoning authority in the upcoming Maryland General Assembly session.

Baier is proposing replacing the present nursing home building with a 90 unit four-story condominium apartment building with elevators. The building is to wrap around three sides of a parking garage. To do so, a change in zoning regulations is necessary if the property is not rezoned and Baier is seeking city support for a zoning text amendment.

At its August 30 worksession councilmembers raised many concerns about the project and sought a legally binding agreement with Baier to assure that the project would be done in the manner agreed to by the city.

Tom Haller of Gibbs and Haller and Steve Gang of Baier Properties joined the council, Assistant City Manager David Moran and Assistant Planning Director Terri Hruby at the worksession. Together they went over the issues identified at the prior meeting, identifying those apparently agreed upon and where more work may be needed to address council concerns.

Of particular interest to council was its planning staff contention that, since the developer is only a contract purchaser at this time, he is in no position to enter into the covenants on the property that were previously discussed. That type of binding agreement would be a crucial element in council's consideration of support for the proposed zoning text amendments sought by Baier. Without such an agreement, staff argued, there would be no guarantee that the promised covenants by the developer could be relied upon. In staff's view, without covenants giving the city site plan approval authority and limiting both building height, lot coverage and other development commitments, they would not be comfortable having the city support the proposed legislation. Staff concerns were laid out in a memo to the city manager on September 14.

Tom Haller, the attorney representing Baier, sent the mayor a letter dated September 16 which attempted to respond to all of the questions posed by council at the August 30 meeting. Mayor Judith Davis asked that he go over that list of items.

Site Plan

By reorienting the proposed building on the site, virtually all of the existing woodlands on the property can be retained, particularly the trees along Greenbelt Road.

Thanks Great Pumpkin

It was hard to uproot my child and leave my home town (Baltimore) and move to Greenbelt. But I fell in love with one of her residents and, frankly, I fell in love with this town. We thought we were living in a sort of paradise, playgrounds galore, great co-operative spirit, kind neighbors, comfortable politics, concerned community, walking paths, well . . . you know, you live here too. This year our pumpkin vine grew and grew and grew, as living things will, on its own path just outside our fence. With endless fascination, we watched the progress of our one pumpkin every day. When our little pumpkin, for whom we had great hopes, was stolen, plucked from the vine – I felt a cold slap of 21st century reality. I was crushed, maybe even more than my daughter. Greenbelt didn’t seem quite as friendly through that lens.

Today, when Isobel and I came home from school, a lovely pumpkin sat on our porch. You kind and thoughtful soul did more than give us a seasonal squash, you’ve really restored my faith in folks. Thanks, Great Pumpkin! We will enjoy autumn now.

Susan Taylor,
Isobel's mom

Dear Great Pumpkin,
Thanks, we will play with it.
Love, love, love,
Isobel

OPEN LETTER To Mayor Davis and Councilmembers:

I just read tonight about the behavior of the management company running Springhill Lake (SHL) apartments (News Review story of 9/30/04).

Apparently SHL has not received payment due for rental of the apartments in question but the breach of contract obviously lies with the companies that had entered into lease agreements with SHL – not those companies’ defrauded clients. SHL can and should pursue those companies into the hills and seek all possible redress from them but for SHL to meanwhile talk of evicting individuals who were, themselves, defrauded is reprehensible corporate behavior.

If the facts are as reported in the paper, I believe that SHL’s management is acting in a grossly unfair manner and I urge council to insist that they consider alternatives to evicting these already-victimized tenants.

I urge the city to immediately intervene in this situation. This city has worked in partnership with SHL in a number of areas in the past, ranging from enhanced police protection, to operation and planned expansion of a recreation center, to deference in matters related to planning for the Metro site. I hope you will put these all on the line in this case. Let the company that owns SHL know that the city will not spend time and public funds to improve the value of their assets here if they will not behave as a decent corporate citizen.

Artistic Freedom?

Sometime between Saturday night and Sunday morning, the New Deal Café walls were plastered with posters and images of President George Bush. A good number of the images contained amateur artwork of painted-in gross mustaches, beards and big horned-rim glasses. The walls also contained numerous hateful and poorly worded anti-Bush slogans.

If this is an attempt to make the public aware of the upcoming election, I presume that posters of Kerry will appear next week with drawings of mustaches and negative ads and then Nader . . .

If it is not an advertisement for the election, it is a pathetically distasteful reflection of some individual’s perception of politics in general and the current president in particular.

Republican or Democrat, the position of president is due a certain amount of respect from the citizens of a free country.

If the portrayal of the presidency in the New Deal Café is representative of “artistic freedom,” it is appalling to have something this one-sided, bitter and disgusting hanging in a public place. I am embarrassed for the individuals involved with the display and embarrassed for the customers who are forced to view it.

On Screen

“Napoleon Dynamite” Checks In

“Napoleon Dynamite,” the would-be deadpan comedy at Old Greenbelt Theatre (as of Friday, October 8), serves up clever opening credits but then dishes out more fizzle than sizzle.

In small town Idaho, our geeky namesake (Jon Heder) is way out of synch at home and high school. His only pal, Pedro (Efren Ramirez), is a somnolent Mexican newcomer; girls are beyond his reach; he’s at odds with off-track brother Kip (Aaron Ruell) and antic Uncle Rico (Jon Gries), who moves in on the boys when head-of-family Granny goes to the hospital.

First-time feature director and co-writer Jared Hess salts the film with an occasional fillip but lively bits and comic lines are in short supply (ditto for anything suggestive or violent, despite a PG rating). The two biggest scenes – Napoleon suddenly taking center stage and an idyllically-set wedding scene – draw unevenly on spoofery and more serious ingredients.

A warning: The final scene comes after final credits roll. And an acknowledgment: At least two other reviews found much to like in “Napoleon Dynamite.” What’s that saying about there’s no accounting for taste . . .

David W. Falter

David W. Falter, 87, of Green Ridge House, died of cancer on Wednesday, September 29, 2004. He and his wife, pioneer Lossie M. Thurston Falter were married in 1943 and had celebrated their 61st wedding anniversary. They lived in Greenbelt for most of their married life. (During World War II Mrs. Falter lived with her parents.) The Falters lived first at 16-D Crescent Road, also 1-H and 4-B Gardenway, Greenbriar and Green Ridge House.

Mr. Falter fought in World War II with the 135th Army Engineers. He worked in the United States Post Office in Hyattsville for 28 years.

An avid golfer, Mr. Falter played until he could no longer see. He was declared legally blind about the time they moved into Green Ridge House.

Mr. Falter was a member of Greenbelt American Legion Post 136. He also belonged to the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) and the Disabled American Veterans (DAV).

One grandchild preceded him in death. vention of breast cancer. To encourage community involvement, all customers who wear a pink ribbon to participating GNC stores on Friday, October 15 – National Mammogram Day – will receive 10 percent off their purchase of regularly priced products.

GNC will also encourage "Denim Day" participation in its stores on October 15. Employees who donate $5 to the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation may wear jeans and a pink ribbon to work.

For more information on Breast Cancer Awareness Month activities, visit Greenbelt GNCs at Greenway Center and Beltway Plaza or online at www.gnc.com.

What is Islam?

In today's busy world, have our personal interests overtaken our moral virtues or will we still stand for the truth? Justice is one of the greatest virtues in Islam.

"O ye who believe, stand out firmly for justice, as witnesses to God, even as against yourselves, or your parents, or your kin, and whether it be against rich or poor: for God can best protect both. Follow not the lusts (of your hearts), lest ye swerve, and if ye distort (justice) or decline to do justice, verily God is well acquainted with all that ye do."
—The Holy Quran 4:135

GREENBELT TREE TOUR

Join the Advisory Committee on Trees and the City’s Horticulturist on a tour of some of the City’s most significant trees this Saturday, October 9. The tour will begin at Schrom Hills Park at 12:30 PM next to the Longleaf Pine in the Schrom Hills parking lot. This tree is the tallest Longleaf Pine in the state of Maryland. Nearby, in the park is the County Champion Deodar Cedar. Other County Champions on the tour include a Star Magnolia and a London Plane tree. Some rather uncommon trees are also on the tour, including a Big Leaf Magnolia and a Sourwood. Other trees of large stature include two giant White Ashes, a White Oak much older than the City, a giant Mulberry and a beautiful English Hawthorne. If fruit is present on the trees we will gather it for propagation at the City’s nursery. Offspring of these trees will be available to the public at future City events. The group will view the two trees at Schrom Hills Park and then travel as a group on the Greenbelt Connection bus to several other sites with significant trees. The tour is expected to last less than two hours and will return to Schrom Hills Park when completed. Think you know of a big tree not on the tour? Come along and tell us about it. Maybe we can get it on next year’s tour.

By comparing the lot coverage for the existing and proposed buildings it was determined that the existing nursing home provides a total lot coverage of 41.5 percent, compared with site coverage of the proposed condominium project at 35 percent. Council was pleased with the reorientation of the building to preserve the wooded buffers but questioned the lot coverage comparison. Councilmembers requested a more detailed accounting of the site coverage percentages.

The revised conceptual site plan will provide an additional 10 parking places for visitor parking along the driveway providing access to the parking garage. About 20 additional spaces will be provided inside the garage. These changes would increase available parking from approximately 180 spaces to 220 spaces.

Greenbelt citizen and University Square resident Barry Schlesinger raised concerns about the potential for spill-over parking from the proposed residential development into the adjacent University Square apartment parking lots. Council seemed to share those concerns.

Cooperative

Council had asked the developer to consider the feasibility of establishing the housing project as a cooperative. Although Baier investigated this possibility, he determined that there is not a sufficient number of lenders, builders or purchasers either familiar or comfortable with cooperative ownership versus a condominium regime. Councilmembers expressed disappointment with that conclusion and again urged the developer to consider that option.

Regarding council's concern about the adequacy of the existing entrance to the site, Baier has retained the Traffic Group as traffic consultants to assist in addressing those concerns. The consultant has recommended that a study be conducted to determine the suitability of the existing entrance in serving the traffic currently using the entrance. The study would also evaluate the impact of a new light at Lakecrest Drive on the proposed 90 residential units, as well as any additional improvements at the entrance to facilitate safe ingress and egress from the site. Baier would expect to address this issue as part of the development review process.

Another issue raised by council related to the construction materials used in the condominium project. Again, Baier has investigated the advantages and disadvantages of utilizing wood versus concrete construction and concluded that under current building code regulations, wood frame construction would create a facility that is safe and consistent with the city's concern that the most up-to-date techniques be incorporated into the structure.

The project is planned as a four-story residential building in wood frame construction with a full sprinkler system meeting all current codes, fire suppression requirements and inspection standards. In their opinion a wood frame building is as safe as a masonry building if modern construction standards are employed.

Baier also assured council that the wood frame construction would afford more flexibility and a greater variety of methods to address and abate noise transmission between floors and between adjacent residential units. He offered to provide the city with a range of sound attenuation options for review. From his perspective, the ability to provide a comfortable and quiet unit would be critical to the overall marketability and success of the project.

Although not discussed in Haller's letter, councilmembers raised the issue of planned amenities for the site and repeated their concerns about convenient pedestrian access to the proposed building from Greenbelt Road, sitting areas, picnic tables and a possible small tot lot playground for the site.

City Support

Baier and Haller continued their request for city support for zoning legislation they would seek from the county council. To allay council's concern, they offered an alternative to strict covenants by entering into an agreement with the city including signed covenants that the city could file once the property ownership change occurs. A negotiated agreement could be developed before the legislation is enacted. If the city was not satisfied with the resultant agreement, they would still be able to request that the legislation be withdrawn.

The Baier organization faced a critical deadline of September 28 for introduction of the proposed legislation in order for the county council to enact the changes in its current legislative calendar. If the legislation were introduced on September 28, the legislative review process would take about eight to 12 weeks. By that time the city could determine if it wished to support or oppose the legislation.

Most members of council were concerned about the situation they were faced with but still interested in how the city could best influence the development. Councilmember Rodney Roberts made it clear that he did not favor increasing the impervious area of development on the site, did not favor the building height relaxation and cautioned against council making a decision at the worksession. As the discussion ended, the councilmembers decided not to make any decision regarding the legislation but to continue the city's discussions with the developer regarding the proposed agreements and making the commitments legally binding.

(Note: revised legislation containing the zoning text amendments was presented for introduction at the September 28 meeting of the Prince George's County Council (sitting as the District Council.) The revised language addressed the concerns raised by Greenbelt at the August 30 and September 22 work sessions. The item was not on the city council's agenda of September 27.)

Municipal Zoning

Council discussed briefly the prospects (or lack thereof) for legislation that would enable local planning and zoning authority for municipal governments in Prince George's County in the upcoming Maryland General Assembly. Efforts over the past several years to achieve such authority from the legislature have not been successful and the council and city staff outlook for the upcoming session (January 2005) is not bright. Davis indicated she would urge that the issue not be abandoned but, rather, there be a pause so that proponents could take a look at other strategies that could be used to achieve success.

a cheerful environment, as far as possible from the industrial environment in which they carried out their labor.

With a series of slides of magazine advertisements depicting refrigerators, Nickles showed how appliance companies changed product designs almost on a yearly basis, hoping to invite consumers to change models of refrigerators as they changed models of cars. Unfortunately for the companies, that was not in the cards. The two kinds of products had very different symbolic messages in the lives of potential purchasers – and surely a different gender aura.

Why the rosebuds on the silverware? The pink lampshade in the picture window? The fringed and overstuffed living room chair?

According to a mammoth market research survey conducted by "True Story" magazine, with its 10 million blue collar women subscribers, these design items evoked their hopes and dreams for their marriages. Curiously, of all household appliances available in that postwar world, the all-out favorite was the stove! Apparently – though Nickles did not say so – subliminally no one needed reminding that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach.

The man was advised that he was under arrest, at which time he assaulted two officers as they attempted to place him in custody. He continued to resist attempts to place him in handcuffs, assaulting a third officer who responded to the scene to assist in the arrest. AWARDS continued from page 1

Appreciation dinners are ordinarily held in the Terrace Room on the condominiums’ premises but this year the group “decided to do something different to celebrate,” said Jennifer Fullmer of CVI.

The first award given in the ceremony conducted by Barbara Smith, president of the Greenbriar Community Association, was to Bob Taylor, for having completed 20 years of service to the community’s physical plant. Calling him “the heart and soul of Greenbriar,” many attendees spoke very highly of Taylor. Steve Bupp, owner of CVI, said he is “extremely proud and respectful of everything Mr. Taylor has done.”

A representative from each of the three phases gave awards to its outstanding volunteers. Arlene Schpiegelman from Phase II said proudly, while passing out awards, “there were almost more volunteers than I could keep track of.” The climax of the event was Smith’s presentation to the Fire Relief Committee of the funds recently accumulated for the displaced residents. Raised through yard sales, donations and even keeping a jar for loose change in Phase III, $2,384 was given to Larry Noda and Schpiegelman toward the goal of paying one month’s condo fees for each of the 15 uninhabitable units. Smith noted the “heartfelt generosity” of those assisting the effort and that the return of those displaced by the fire was “eagerly awaited.”

Bupp said that the residents whose units were being rebuilt were “extremely patient” and said that the units should be ready by early January. He explained that the process of renovation has been a “challenge” because the building code had changed over the years from that of the original design of the building.

Bob Taylor Celebrates 20 Years at Greenbriar

Excerpts from the Greenbriar Crier article by Sarah Phillips about Bob Taylor, printed with permission.

It was close to 20 years ago when Bob Taylor got the call to remove a coffin from a trash room in one of the buildings. The coffin, it turns out, was some sort of prop and Taylor’s tenure with Greenbriar had only just begun.

A licensed engineer, he began working for the Greenbriar Community Association in 1984 as a mechanic in Phase II. Since 1988 Taylor has been responsible for the operation of Greenbriar’s central heating and cooling plant, providing heat, air conditioning and hot water to the entire community. The plant runs 24 hours a day, seven days a week, all 365 days of the year. It’s an important job, held by a man who is rarely seen by the community.

Or perhaps residents have seen Taylor tooling about the property wearing his forest green coveralls, behind the wheel of a restored military truck. He and his wife of over 20 years, Anja, belong to a local organization that maintains and restores military vehicles.

Taylor has a B.A. degree in forestry from Texas A&M University. He spent seven seasons with the U.S. Forest Service in Montana and Idaho fighting forest fires.

He has encountered a good bit of variety at Greenbriar. As a mechanic he tackled 14-foot icicles and battled black snakes.

Taylor does a lot of troubleshooting in the central plant and also handles the maintenance and repair of underground utilities. Compared to similar properties, Greenbriar and Glen Oaks have had impressively few property-wide power outages through the years.

Simplicity Circle Forming in October

For those who feel their lives and houses are filled with busy clutter, maxed-out credit cards and overdone holiday celebrations, there is another way. A simplicity discussion circle is forming in Greenbelt and will meet Sunday, October 10 from 5 to 6:30 p.m. at the Greenbelt Arts Center. The resulting group will then meet for eight additional sessions. Discussion circles are free but there is a fee for the study guide. For more information contact Lore Rosenthal at 301-317-9821 or simplicitygrpsmd@aol.com.

GIVES Plans Programs On Awards, Safe Driving

by Virginia Beauchamp

After a number of requests for a one-day safe-driving course to be offered in Greenbelt, GIVES President John Taylor announced at the group’s fall quarterly meeting that he had been able to schedule the popular national AARP program, under GIVES sponsorship, in a morning and afternoon session on Monday, October 18. (Last year’s format of two half-day sessions for the course on different days was seen by many as less convenient.)

The safe-driving course will take place in the Community Center and will be limited to a total of 25 participants. It is designed for persons over 50 years of age as a means to refresh their driving skills. In some cases auto insurance companies recognize such participation in the form of premium reductions.

For a modest fee, participants will receive a course workbook dealing with such issues as physical changes in the aging driver, potential trouble spots, driver guidance, safety considerations, road rage and managing driving at intersections and on the freeway. Early enrollment is urged, since courses tend to fill up quickly.

For information on registration, call the GIVES office as soon as possible at 301-507-6580.

On the day of the course, the program will break at noon for lunch. Participants will be free to dine at a facility of their own choosing, perhaps in Roosevelt Center, though the county-run, reduced-price commercial kitchen in the Community Center may be particularly convenient. Reservations there must be made by the preceding Friday at 301-397-2208, ext 4215.

GIVES News

GIVES office manager Jean Lombardo announced that current membership in the work-exchange cooperative organization is now at 182. During the previous quarter 60 requests had been filled and over 296 credit hours earned.

Lombardo emphasized the importance of volunteers to staff the phone in the GIVES office in the Community Center to receive and fill requests. The office is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to noon. She particularly seeks a volunteer willing to make a regular two-hour weekly commitment for a period of time.

An ad hoc committee headed by treasurer Robert Terrell reported on a plan to create a special GIVES service award to persons past and present who had contributed in an outstanding way on behalf of GIVES. Names of such persons would be engraved on a special plaque to be hung on the wall in the Senior Lounge of the Community Center, where the GIVES message center is located. Each awardee would also receive a certificate at the annual membership meeting in June. A committee will select the persons to be so honored.

Depression

The September 18 meeting concluded with a talk by Helen S. Barnes, a gero-psychiatric nurse counselor with the EA Mental Health Project of the Prince George’s County Department of Family Services, who spoke on depression and suicide risk in the elderly.

Michele Touchet of Greenbelt East spoke next. She had done extensive research, compiled a list of specific recommendations and had photographs to illustrate the points she was making. She described herself as a relatively new Greenbelt resident who moved here because Greenbelt is pedestrian and bicycle-friendly. She documented some serious problems.

Touchet said Hanover Parkway was “her lifeline” in reaching shops and services but was a dangerous road for walkers and bikers. She called for contiguous sidewalks so that people can walk safely from communities to Greenway Center. She cited a lack of curb cuts or ramps at many points hampering access for people with disabilities. She asked that more provisions be made for bicyclists. Touchet took the council and audience through a “virtual walk,” with photos showing many of the hazards she and others had encountered.

Mayor Judith Davis and councilmembers thanked her for a very thorough presentation. Craze responded that many of the items Touchet had listed would be covered in the new traffic calming plan but that others had not been considered or rejected as unfeasible. Craze thought that a contiguous sidewalk would be a possibility despite a number of engineering challenges and council encouraged her to follow up.

All new curbs and sidewalks will have ramps to facilitate handicapped access, she said. Regarding bikers, Craze indicated that wide shoulders had been maintained to accommodate bik-ers. In the traffic roundabouts bicyclists have to join traffic and she agreed to look specifically at that issue to see if others changes could be helpful.

Fred Gasper, with some of the same photos as Touchet, had many, but not all, of the same conclusions. He specifically addressed bike lanes, suggesting that in places where wide bike lanes were not possible, the city might consider defining a narrower bike area. He mentioned several busy roads where this had been done. Designating a separate bike area had given bikers greater security and protection from traffic.

ERHS Parking

A Greenbriar resident questioned the impact of traffic changes on parking as well as the impact of newly implemented parking charges for Eleanor Roosevelt High School students. He was concerned that the new policy would force students from the school parking lot into nearby streets in Greenbriar. Council promised to monitor.

Crosswalks

In a related discussion, council approved 14 new crosswalks within the city. Most will be installed in Greenbelt East but a few are planned for the center city and Springhill Lake. In addition to the new pedestrian walkways, the city will replace signs in conformity with established standards and will trim shrubs and trees which obscured signs and repaint faded markings.

Council focused at length on two crosswalks – one on Laurel Hill Road where the inner walkway ends and another on Crescent Road between the bus stops just east of the police station.

Craze will study the plans for both in light of council concerns. She said it’s important to look at the full consequences of making a change. You can often create another problem while solving the first problem, she said.

TheBus

Council objected to plans to reduce TheBus service in Greenbelt. The county Department of Public Works and Transportation plans to reduce service on Routes 11 and 15 by eliminating one peak-hour bus on each line. The department cites low ridership on both routes.

Davis objected. She said that low ridership could result from the lack of information about the bus schedule. “You often don’t know when TheBus will get there and where it will take you,” she said. Duplication with Metro bus routes may also be part of the problem, which should be addressed when a new study on routes is completed. Meanwhile the city will urge that existing service levels be restored.

Skateboard Park

proved a contract for $180,000 with California Landscape and Design, Inc., for the design and construction of the city’s new skateboard park. Council also approved a smaller contract with Bradley Site Design, Inc., for the site preparation, including grading, draining, erosion and sediment and preparation of all plans required for building permits. A resolution for negotiated purchase to formalize the selection of contractors will be prepared for the next council meeting.

Councilmembers stated that the skateboard park has been a long time coming and will fill a real need in the city for recreational opportunities for young citizens. However, they also expressed concern that skateboarders have been breaking the law by skateboarding in locations throughout the city. Davis, Councilmember Edward Putens and others spoke out for strict enforcement of the city’s regulations against skateboarding on city property.

Michael McLaughlin, city manager, said that the city had been vigilant and had issued citations and taken several skate-boarders to court. All agreed that when the new park is open, the problem should be greatly diminished. At that point there will be no excuse for skateboarding offenses. It was estimated that construction will take about three months after the design phase has been completed.

Other Business

The council meeting began with the reading of a proclamation declaring the first week of October Mental Illness Awareness Week. Sylvia Lewis and others spoke in support of the Pink Ribbon Bike Ride through Greenbelt. They said response had been great but they encouraged all councilmembers to take part in the event, which raises money to support people with cancer.

McLaughlin said that the city had won two beautification awards – one for Buddy Attick Lake Park and one for the landscaping on Southway.

Minor changes were made to the solid waste provisions of the Greenbelt city code, primarily to ensure an all-weather route for collectors and that containers were in plain view for pickup.
